Quotes

“At first I thought: I know it all, there is just one truth and it’s mine. And I know it is not necessary to convince somebody, because it’s wrong to convince somebody. But there is something inside me that wants to do that. And I learned that it’s better to listen, and rethink about your own view.”

S

So then I suddenly saw myself as a true representation of our liberal society where we claim to accept everything and understand everything, but we still are outraged when our values our being tested.

I never thought that thinking about the future for me was something distant, it's there I can work for it and I have time. I realised how important it is to put myself into it now, into the present and to get to the future. I feel it's more closer to me than what I felt before.

“The change starts now, the present is more important and for me I really see the ambivalence between me and the future. And the future in the end for me is a circle, not a one way process anymore”

“My answer would be to keep futures literacy in my life by continuing the facilitation process as well. Facilitating is as well a learning process. To keep on learning, making sure that you’re able to facilitate which is also something form inside not just from you guys The assumption I have is that you grow by seeing that you can do things for other people.”
